

Where healing begins™

State of Infusion Therapy Today

Administrative Overload

Physicians and staff spend excessive time on prior authorizations, appeals, and insurance follow-up for specialty medications.

Patient Frustration

Patients face delays in receiving therapy, high out-of-pocket costs, and limited guidance on side effects and support.

Financial Pressure on Providers

Rising drug costs and declining reimbursement create challenges for practices prescribing specialty medications.

Insufficient Patient Education

Patients often lack accessible education on their medication, side effects, adherence strategies, and financial resources.

Fragmented Communication

Disconnection between providers, pharmacies, payers, and manufacturers leads to poor coordination and treatment delays.

Limited Specialty Focus

Many retail pharmacies lack expertise in handling complex therapies, disease-specific protocols, and patient support programs.
